Score yourself a fancy new watch

While playing Team Deathmatch on Call of Duty 4 for 10 hours without a break might sound like the acceptable way to spend the Christmas holidays, at some point the nightmares are going to start worrying about the drawn curtains, constant swearing and those copies of Soldier of Fortune magazine that are piling up outside the front door. So you might want to get a bit of exercise - if only to warm up your reflexes. And there's no better way to make sure that you're not overdoing it, yeah, I'm probably going to keep it up to that nice wet time I had a good-looking sports watch.

Meet the Ex Time Clip & Rip.

Inspired by climbing karabiners and kite-surfing harnesses, it's as much a style statement as an activity essential. It's designed to clip to your belt rather than your wrist, and has a huge list of features, including a built-in compass, magnet and magnifying glass. It's also water-resistant up to 20 metres, so you're prepared for virtually any sporting eventuality. And until someone comes up with a watch that talks calmly to us in Captain Price's voice when we burn off the burger blubber down at the gym, this will do just fine.

30 free photo prints

Plus 20% off all photo gifts from Snapfish

We're not going to patronise you here: in this digital age, most people are more than happy to store photos on their hard drive rather than in a shoebox, and display their favourite snaps on Flickr rather than in a hardback album. But there are occasions - weddings, birthdays, the borderline walking of minor celebrities - which are good to have in print, to frame as a wall, or as a last-minute birthday present for your parents' office.

Enter Snapfish. Not only are they handy with the digital stuff - offering free unlimited sharing and storage of digital photos, plus online photo-editing tools - they also produce beautiful prints of your best (and friends' most embarrassing) snapshots. To give you a taste of their skills, we've teamed up with Snapfish to offer OPM readers 30 quality prints for free. Order them at snapfish.co.uk/gifts, then collect them free at any Anapost stores or have them delivered for as little as 19p.

You can also get 20% percent off all gifts such as hardback photo books by entering the coupon code FUTUREOFFERS. "Just a quick picture, Ma' House!"

How to claim
